For Orthodox Jews, the Jewish way of life is based on believing, practicing, and studying the Old Testament and the explanation of it called the Talmud. Although different Orthodox groups differ, there are core beliefs and practices which they hold in common: God, the truth of the Old Testament, the Jewish nation as defined by God and religion.

~~Jewish Way of Life—RE: Online~~

The Jewish way of life is not an "ism". It is Torah. Read the Bible, the mishnah, the Talmud, the Shulchan Aruch. None of them uses the word "Judaism" for a Torah-true way of life. Since I learned who invented this word "Judaism," and why, I've avoided using it. We are Jews, yes, and our worship is to live according to Torah.

In the tzaddik approach to life, a person focuses wholly upon the good in himself and his world. He sees his mission in life as the endeavor to cultivate his own positive traits, the goodness he sees in others, and all that is pure and holy in G-d's world. Anything negative is to be suppressed and rejected, and utterly disdained.
